VI written in quite a long: letter about my criticism of the film "Snyonara." It is an extremely able criticism of the film in its own right, and although I do hot know Mr Chow, I have seen letters of his in the press of the best film papers in the United Kingdom; any point he raises is of considerable importance and ably expressed.

What Mr Chow reems to object to, is my calling "Sayonara" nn "overemotional" plot. Now I will tell you why I said so. Had I written up my copy while still under the emotional impact of the film, it would have been devastating attack on all parrow minds and crooked natures, that cannot see that all the world is one people.

I would have strafed all those olgmy-minded people who cannot see that falling in love is nothing to do with race or colour, or any other of those artificial barriers erected by the Lilliputian controllers of our destiny. But the fact remains, I have to live in a society that will not permit the obvious. And on that account, I cannot blame Western society alone. The Chinese are extremely raco-conscious, the Japanese also, and they have erected barriers against the mingling of East and West in marriage.

More's the pity, but that is the situation, and such courageous people who defy the narrow conservative conventions of of fiction to become a living society have an uneasy time when the first fine flush of romance is over.

I often met "Colonel Nicholson." / He almost drove me mad times, so that I often wondered whether he thought the job was some big game played by some set of rules declded upon by himself and the enemy commanders.

I can assure you he would not have survived a court martial, except if medical evidence was forthcoming to prove him of disturbed balance of mind.

TTO fully appreciate the tremendous impact of "A Farewell to Arms," we have to recall that the novel was written by Ernest Hemingway over years ago.

Hemingway stayed on in Parls with a crowd of young American writers, and they wrote in forceful terms of the life they saw in the midst of Europe's desolation. They were disillusioned. Nothing they had learned in the New World prepared them for the holocaust they found in the old. Life from being a noble thing, and man a noble creature, they saw life as it was cruci, ugly ignoble, and man a brutal

Rommel is fooled-by own secret code

@ Rammel did not know that his spies in Cairo had been captured. Their secret radio was still on the air ... with a British officer sending "planted" information in the crucial pre-Alamoin days.

TT was the morning conference at Rommel's battle hendquarters in the Western Desert, and what was on the schedule was a fateful decision.

Outside the field-marshal's tent, hidden in wadis under camouflage nets, the soldiers of the Afrikakorps waited beside their tanks for the order to advance. It was to be the final attack this time—the attack that would sweep the Eighth Army out of Egypt and plant the Nazi flag on the Nile.

"The question to be decided," Rommel told his assembled generals, "is where we hit them - and when. How much time have we got before the British are ready?"

Just before Rommel planned to make his attack at Alam Halfe, forward Nazi posts in the desert sighted a British scout car picking its way across No-Man's Land.

They grinted because the scout car was going slap on to one of their minelields. "The British fool will blow himself up if he continues on that course," they said glocfully.

Which, a few minutes later, is exactly what the scout car did. And as darkness fell, the Nazis sent out a patrol to examine the car. Inside they found the shattered, dead body of a British officer. Beside him was an operational map, torn but legi-

The Titanic, built at Belfast at the shipyards of Harland and Wolff, was the arrogant symbol of a materialistic age that would endure forever. Everywhere was mon-triumphant. During the past century he had removed mountains, changed the course of rivers, spanned whole Continents with his railways, and driven back the sea from his lands.

The heavens were black with the smoke of his chimneys as his factories spued out wealth that would never cease. Nature had at last bent her knee and surrendered sto man who had enslaved her. Even the skies experienced the humiliation of man's arrogant encounter, for he hurled his machines and rode the fleecy clouds with ever incrousing confidence.

So came the unsinkable wilp. The arrogant aristocrate of the new wealth were unwilling to

The question is why did Captain Smith, the master of the Titanic, proceed on his , course after the ship had received so many ice warnings on the new fangled wireless?

We know that J. Bruce Ismay was on the ship. He was President of the White Star Line. The White Star Line badly needed the Blue Ribbon for the fastest Atlantic crossing. Did such an experienced commander as Captain Smith allow himself to be overruled by a land

The Californian could have picked up the passengers from the Titantic, but the Californian's wireless officer was tired, so he never heard the Titanic's CQD, nor the later SOS.

An hour and a half before she foundered, the Titanic sent up a burst of rockets. They were seen by members of the Califormian's crew. They wondered what next this super monster of the deep would do. Did the passengers of the Titanic never sleep? Fancy firing rockets at one o'clock in the morning!

So, while the Carpathia raced through the night, and the Californian slumbered a few miles away, the unsinkable Titanic began to go down. At first, there was no panic. Everyone on board knew they travelled on the unsinkable ship, but as the water began to creep across the decks, the order to get into the bonts was obeyed.

There were insufficient boats. Only about one-third of the passengers could be accommodated, and not all of them had gone, having more faith in the olalms made for the ship than the evidence around them. "The band was playing as the ship went down. "Nearer my God to Thee. "They came to save their lives, "Over the Ice-bound sea."

I quote the lines from memory,

The world refused to believe that the ship had sunk. The first newspaper reports gave it that there had been a mishap, but all the passengers were saved. Then, as the full extent of the disaster became known, the whole world stopped work and wondered, and prayed.

I am told by people who memember the event, that it marked the end of an era of security and an over-confident belief in material progress. From then on, disaster after disaster overwhelmed the age. Two years later began the universal slaughter that men call the first World War.

The writer would like to expreso his thanks to Mr George Rearden of the Rank Organisation, and the research departs ment of J. Arthur Rank, who supplied him with the data and pictures for this article. J. Arthur. TATEDNESDAY THEATRE at 9 p.m. presents a double. bill—two 30-minute plays produced in Hongkong. The first has been produced by Pat Egan for the Hongkong Stage Club and is called "No Smoking."

This is a "highly moral comedy" -in fact, half an hour of topical nonsense concerning, the hazards of smoking and the even worse hazards encountered when one tries to stop

It takes the form of a conversation between two men in the nonsmoking compartment of a train, highlighted by amusing flash-back sequences. The cast includes David Jordan, Gil Crowe and Daphne.

The second part of the double bill is a production for Radio Hongkong Actors Studio of an adaptation of a story by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, "The New Catacomb."

A Most Successful Playing Season In Men's Senior League

By "TIME OUT"

In the land where the American game of softball originated, the huddling over a "hot stove" after the playing season is over has become accepted as a traditional practice. At the height of these post-mortems the what-mighthave-been of the game is recalled with some nostalgia. Alas! The word "IF" suddenly becomes the most meaningful in any dictionary.

This very same word crops up in Hongkong whenever local softballers and partisan fans bump into each other. The only difference between the King's Park fraternity and those in the USA is the absence of a the recently elected President of attain competitive form which hot stove - but make no mistake about it.

YOUR BURTHDAY ... By STELLA

SATURDAY, APRIL 12

PORN today, the stars have given you a variety of talents and you may have difficulty in selecting the one upon which you want to concentrate. In fact you may try to take up two careers -until you discover that you are not getting anywhere! Once you learn the important lesson of concentration on a single objective, you are well along the road to eventual success.

You are one to have close family loyalties and your ties of kin are exceptionally strong. It is likely that your own home will become the centre of your social life, and you much prefer entertaining there than going "out on the town." In fact, you may become quite famous for your parties. This is perhaps more true of you members of the fair sex, for it is you who usually manage the domestic scene. You are a gracious horiess and a fine conversationalist. It is likely that you men will use this talent rather differently. You may become well known for your persuasive oratory and probably would do well in public life. You are able to make peace among dissenters, for there is nothing you dislike more than a serious argument. You want peace and harmony surrounding you at all times. Although you are not as robust us you might be, you have a tremendous store of nervous energy which keeps you working at the peak of production. Among those both on this date were: William Brockman

Mission to Colony

London, Apr. 11. The Economist, independent weekly, said today Sir Frank Lee's Board of Trade mission to Hongkong evidently found the Colony's textile industries no more ready to put a voluntary limit on its export of cotton cloth to Britain than when Lancashire sent the Glegg mission early last year.

The journal went on: "It was Hongkong's blunt refusal to fall in with India and Pakistan in any voluntary scheme of limitation that finally wrecked that previous attempt to satisfy Lancashire's desire for some form of protection from Commonwealth competition. SUGGESTING

"But the statement the colony's special negotiating committee put out after 12 days of discussions could be read as suggesting that the Permanent Secretary's visit (Sir Frank Lec's) may have been of some value for Lancashire.

"In it Hongkong stated its willingness to talk directly with Loncashire about a scheme of limitation provided the industry here reaches a prior agree-ment with India and Pakisian." Hongkong had also said that by entering into talks, exporters would not be committed to any figure for exports and that the discussions would be confined to shipments of grey cloth retained in Britain. The Economist commented: "By stipulating a prior agree-he has found some basis for further inter-industry meetings, and both India and Pakistan delegations to Lancashire next month.

FAIRLY CLEAR

The Economist added: "It seems fairly clear at least that Sir Frank Lee has not been to decide between putting a quota on Commonwealth imports for the first time and letting an industry based largely on Chineso refugeo capital and management contime to use colony status to is compete without hindrance with a domestic industry in its own market."—Reuter.
